If you wish to make any commercial use of the Digital Newspaper (other than material in the public domain), you must obtain the copyright owner's permission. All newspapers published on or after January 1, 1923 are generally protected by the U.S. Copyright Law (Title 17, U.S.C.). The copyright owners have made the Digital Newspapers available under the Creative Commons Attribution Non-Commercial 4.0 license. A user may read, share, download, and adapt the Digital Newspaper provided that (a) the user must attribute the original and adaptations of the Digital Newspaper, and (b) the user may not make any commercial use of the original or adaptations of the Digital Newspaper without expressed permission of the copyright owner. A user may subsequently impose other license terms as long as these two requirements are met. For a complete statement of the license, see: <http://creativecommons.org/licenses/by-nc/4.0>.
