Join Demian Katz from Villanova and several other developers and users from the VuFind mailing lists for an informal discussion of the popular open source library discovery software (and the application used in the Catholic portal). Feel free to bring questions about the current state of the package and suggestions for its future.

Monday, June 28, 2010. 5:00 – 6:30

The Humanities Knowledge Kiosk: Transforming Catholic Scholarship through Advanced Textual Linguistic Analysis, Hosted by Jonathan Bengtson, Director of Library and Archives for the University of St. Michael's College and the Pontifical Institute of Mediaeval Studies in Toronto; Art Crivella, CEO and co-founder of Crivella West Inc.; and, Rich Ekstrom, Chief of Staff and Operations at Crivella West
Location: Georgetown University. Murray Room on the 5th floor of Lauinger Library

Please join us for this special presentation on the partnership between libraries and research institutes to visualize and exploit the research potential of large numbers of digital texts.

Crivella West has developed software ("Humanities Knowledge Kiosk") to analyze digitized text with sophisticated accuracy and complexity. Originally developed for use in the area of class action litigation, the software was first adapted for advanced humanities scholarship by the National Institute for Newman Studies (NINS), also based in Pittsburgh, in partnership with the John M. Kelly Library at the University of St. Michael's College in the University of Toronto, to analyze the digitized complete works of John Henry Newman.

Presenters will give a brief survey of the partnership; demonstrate the Knowledge Kiosk; discuss current projects with Newman, Nouwen, Chesterton and Lonergan; and, provide a conceptual framework for how the project might be applied to the millions of digitized documents now available, allowing scholars unprecedented means of analyzing textual material across a wide spectrum of academic subjects. A discussion of how to partner with the CRRA is also anticipated.

During your visit to Georgetown, be sure to visit Georgetown's Rare Books exhibit entitled "Check It Out: The Origins of the Georgetown University Library."

This exhibition marks the 40th anniversary of Georgetown's Lauinger Library with a look at the origins of the University's book collections. Their long and varied history dates back almost to the founding of the University in 1789 (if not before, since the Library includes books brought by the first Jesuit missionaries to Maryland in the 1630s). This exhibition takes up a few threads of that story, from the founding of the College Library, to the handwritten 1831 library catalog that documents the core collection—much of which still survives—to the highly focused Jesuitica collection formed by early librarian Thomas C. Levins, to the building of the dramatic Riggs Library and the acquisition at the end of the 19th century of one of Georgetown's crown jewels, the 10,000 volume Americana library of John Gilmary Shea. These early developments formed the basis for some of the greatest strengths in the Special Collections Research Center today, especially its exceptional collections of Jesuitica and Catholic Americana.

The exhibition includes several of Georgetown's great treasures: a first edition of Wilson's American Ornithology, to which the Library subscribed, and George and Martha Washington's copy of Mark Catesby's Natural History, donated by George Washington Parke Custis. The exhibition skips ahead to the Library's millionth and two millionth volumes (respectively, a first edition of Milton's Paradise Lost, and the rare broadside announcing George Washington's Thanksgiving proclamation). It then concludes with a glance back at the building of the Joseph Mark Lauinger Library 40 years ago.

Open M-F, 9:00-5:30; located on the 5th floor of Lauinger Library, on the same floor as the Murray Room.
